More "Scratch" on Fleas

By Sheldon Schall

A few years ago I wrote an article on fleas which I will not repeat in this space. I have a tendency to quote statistics and easily transcribed facts via numbers. Looking for information to fill white space I came across a series of articles on fleas.

- ◆ There are 1900 species of fleas; 99.9% is the Ctenocephalides species (also referred to as "cat flea") found on our cats and dogs.
- Female fleas can lay 50 eggs per day and over 500 eggs over their life.
- ◆ A flea infestation is made up of: 50% eggs, 35% larvae, 10% pupea and 5% adults.
- Only 1% (1 of 100 fleas) of the flea population on a dog is seen by the owner.
- Fleas prefer a temperature of 65—80 degrees and 75— 85% relative humidity.
- Pet owners spend $4 billion per year in professional flea control, groomer bills relating to fleas, vet bills relating to fleas and over the counter flea medications/treatments.
- Wisconsin pet owners are most impacted by fleas March through October.

Confession from a Vintage Kitchen Utensil collector

From Readers Digest

A collector had a "utensil" in her collection that's intended purpose was a mystery. It looked like a cross between a metal slotted spoon and a spatula. It was displayed among other vintage utensils in a decorative utensil caddy her kitchen.

During a walk through a rummage sale she discovered an identical "utensil" in its original package. The mystery of the spoon/spatula was solved when she found it was a pooper-scooper Artio earned her Rally Novice title on December 16 at Northwest Obedience Club's Rally Trial. I'm very proud of her. She tied for the highest score of 99. She took second place because a field spaniel was faster. She had two first places with perfect scores of 100 at the Illinois specialty.

AKC Funds Women's Shelters

Studies have shown that nearly half (48%) of women delay leaving an abusive situation out of concern for their pet, and 70% of victims report that their abuser threatened, injured or killed their pet.

The AKC Humane Fund's Women's Shelter Grant program attempts to tackle this problem by supporting shelters that welcome pets on-site. These grants make it easier for abused women with pets to seek shelter and help break the cycle of domestic abuse.

As an organization that is committed to advancing the well-being of all dogs, it is heartbreaking when domestic abuse threatens the happiness and health of humans and their pets. Women experiencing domestic violence endure extremely difficult situations, and having to choose between seeking safety and protecting their pet shouldn't be one of them. That's why this grant program is so important—it saves lives.

Since 2014, our program has donated to 38 shelters across the country, contributing nearly $108,000 dollars.

This map highlights the locations across the country where the AKC Humane Fund has supported Women's Shelters with this program.

With the donations from this program, these shelters can provide beds, foods, veterinary care, medications, and more for pets of domestic abuse survivors. Women can safely leave abusive situations with their pets and once safe, pets can help provide support, hope, and joy to their owners during the recovery process.

Do you know a Women's Shelter that could benefit from one of these grants? In support of Domestic Violence Awareness Month, we urge individuals to donate to the program and shelters to apply. Learn more about donating here. If you want to apply for a grant, check out the qualifications and application form here

More fat, less protein, keeps dogs' sniffs up to snuff

A research team from Auburn and Cornell universities (led by Dr. Joseph Wakshlag, faculty and chief of nutrition at Cornell's College of Veterinary Medicine's) has sniffed out a new way to boost dogs' detection talents can be further improved through diet. Its findings could change how detection dogs are fed and boost their detection abilities.

Dogs tested in the new facility signaled with 90 percent and above accuracy. They found they can push detection performance even further with the right kind of food. Bucking conventional thinking, the group found that cutting protein and adding fats helped trained dogs perform better in exercise and detection tests. Measuring how different diets affected each dog, they found that dogs eating the normal diet enhanced with corn oil returned to normal body temperatures most quickly after exercise and were better able to detect smokeless powder, ammonia nitrate, and TNT. "Corn oil has lots of polyunsaturated fats, similar to what you'd find in a lot of nuts and common grocery store seed oils," said Wakshlag.

It could be that fat somehow improves nose signaling structures or reduces body temperature or both. But lowering protein also played a part in improving olfaction."

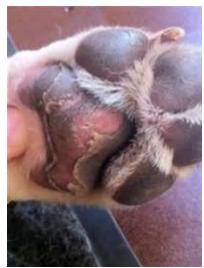

"If you're a dog, digesting protein raises body temperature, so the longer your body temperature is up, the longer you keep panting, and the harder it is to smell well," said Wakshlag. "A sled dog or greyhound may need more protein to keep going. But detection dogs tend to exercise in shorter bursts and need to recover quickly and smell well. For that, less protein and more fat could help."

Protecting Your Dog's Paws

Originally posted at the Sault Dog Blog, by MamaJ, a coauthored blog.}

When was the last time you took a good look at your dog's feet? In case it's been a while, let's take a peek at this neat structure. The bottom of your dog's front foot will have six distinct pads: four digital pads, one metacarpal pad, and one carpal pad (See image). Abrasions on these pads are fairly common, especially if your dog does a lot of running around on hard surfaces.

Originally, we were going to post about this earlier in the season, but it actually makes more sense to discuss your dog's foot pads now that snow is melting. Why? When the snow starts to melt, you'll likely begin to notice tons of sand and debris along the edges of the road and on sidewalks. Simply having the pavement make an appearance can mean injury for your pup's feet!

Fortunately, you have a few options for keeping your dog's pads in tip-top shape.

There are commercial products available to coat the foot pads before exercise. Many contain natural wax and are a safe choice for dogs. The wax provides a barrier between your dog's pads and the surfaces on which he walks. It won't however, moisturize the skin.

When you return from a walk with your dog, you may want to rinse his feet in warm water to remove any sand, chemicals, salt, or ice from the surface of his feet and between his toes. Mild soap isn't necessary, unless your dog stepped in something undesirable - just be sure to rinse off the soap well. The fur between the toes often collects a ton of debris. With clean feet, your dog will also have a better chance to avoid ingesting harmful things when he licks his feet clean afterwards.

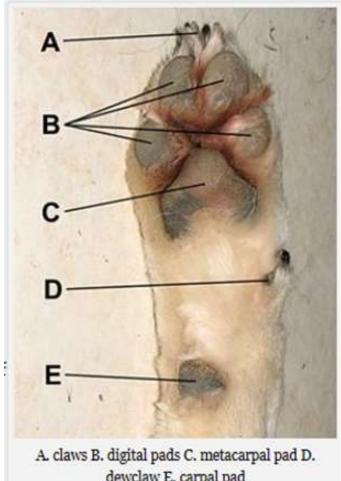

Once your dog is at rest (for most, this is at night), give his feet a good once-over. Check for missing pieces of pad - these spots will appear smooth and pink. You might even notice some blood. Often, you'll find an abrasion when your dog is walking on snow and you see blood on the snow. Be sure to check the regular skin between the toes, too. Sometimes, a claw can nick the skin when a dog plays. If your dog still has his dewclaws on the front paws, look at those, too. Dewclaws can be torn (or completely removed) during boisterous play. While this isn't life-threatening, it can become a source of infection and will bleed quite a bit.

Again, while the dog is at rest (hopefully, ignoring you!), apply a thin coat of a moisturizer. Creams are best because they are thick. A word of caution: whatever you put on your dog's feet will likely be licked at some point so choose only natural products. It may sound strange, but olive oil works well. You can also crack open a vitamin E capsule and apply its contents. Once moisturizing is complete, applying the wax will help lock the oil in place.

After a few pampering sessions, your dog's feet will be the envy of the dog park!

Dog Food Review

An article summarizing the review of 115 brands of dog food at the following Internet link was published in November 2016: http://www.reviews.com/dog-food/

The Review.com article is not clear on the qualitative or quantitative facets behind the research other than the narrative at: http://www.reviews.com/about/ and the explanations and descriptions in the article itself. Never-the-less it is an interesting article to read; somewhat expressing what dog food manufacturers do not want us to know. Summarizing:

According to Review.com research, they:

- Developed a list of over 11,000 people with connections to the dog food industry and narrowed it down to the best for their review purpose.
- Over 20 experts contributed their valuable time to the project, including veterinarians, dog trainers, animal behaviorists, university researchers, and authors.
- Surveyed 300 dog owners and asked them if they knew what was in their dog's food.
- Gathered a list of over 8,000 search queries to find out what matters most to dog owners.
- Read and analyzed 72 of the most popular articles and studies on dog food.
- Compiled a list of 2219 formulas from 115 brands and reviewed their ingredients.

Their criteria in developing a conclusion:

- ♦ They removed products where the first ingredient is not a meat of any kind.
- They removed products containing corn, soy, wheat, grain, or flour.
- They removed products containing beet pulp or
- They removed products that contained by-products or sauces.
- ♦ They reviewed brands for recalls, ingredient sources, history, and customer satisfaction.
- ♦ They reviewed the remaining formulas based on the best ratio of protein, fat, and carbs, as well as the source of protein.

That left them with the following 25 dog food brands:

- 1. ACANA
- 2. Addiction
- Annamaet
- 4. AvoDerm
- 5. Back to Basics
- 6. By Nature
- 7. Earthborn Holistic
- 8. Fromm
- 9. Grandma Lucy's
- 10. Hi-Tek Naturals
- 11. Horizon

- 12. K9 Natural
- 13. Lotuz
- 14. Nature's Logic
- 15. Orijen
- 16. Pinnacle
- 17. Precise Holistic Complete
- 18. Primal
- 19. Stella & Chewy's
- 20. Stewart
- 21. Stewart Pro-Treat
- 22. The Honest Kitchen
- 23. The Real Meat Company
- 24. Wysong
- 25. ZiwiPeak

You are able to set filters and display more brands in the "Our Final Choices" section of the Internet article.

Canine Performance Science Program

The Auburn University College of Veterinary Medicine EcoDogs program is a strategic partnership between the college's CPS and the Auburn University School of Forestry and Wildlife Sciences. The EcoDogs program was established to detect plant and animal species in the field for the benefit of ecological research, management, and conservation. Canines are the most efficient and sensitive mobile detection system on the planet. The EcoDogs have found underground microscopic tree root fungi, Bovine Viral Diarrhea Virus in cattle, scat from a variety of species, invasive Burmese Pythons in the Florida Everglades, and more. Whether you are looking for trace amounts of a biological material, chemical pollutants, or tracking a dynamic animal, if it has an odor, they can find it. According to the Director, we can find what you can't see, because you can't hide odor. Our dogs have extraordinary capabilities and can efficiently locate your target of interest in an unbiased manner.
